

Good Jobs Metro Boston Coalition Child Care Sectoral Partnerships

Developing a Child Care Workforce Pipeline for Greater Boston & Beyond

Project Overview

The CAYL Institute, whose mission is to organize, equip, and empower people to create change on behalf of children, developed a partnership to design and implement a child care workforce pipeline program for Greater Boston. This innovative three-year project is funded by the Department of Commerce and sponsored by Boston's Office of Workforce Development. The partnership aims to place workers into quality child care jobs.

100 NEW FCC EDUCATORS

Supported to obtain a Family Child Care License & open a business

50 EXISTING FCC EDUCATORS

Receiving additional training to enhance their business

500 NEW ECE TEACHERS

Entering the workforce through recruitment and support services

200 CURRENT TEACHERS

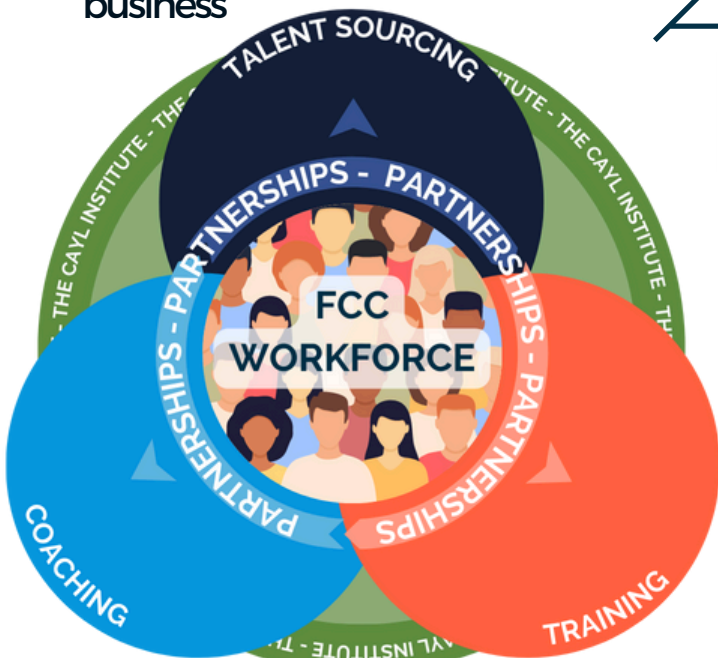

Acquiring lead teacher qualifications

The Problem:

A reduction in the Family Child Care Workforce has severely impacted the ability of Massachusetts families to meet their care needs.

The Vision:

- Bringing back, reinvigorating, and expanding the Family Child Care Workforce
- Supporting existing Family Child Care educators in effective practices to elevate their business

Intended Outcomes:

- Support individuals in obtaining their Family Child Care (FCC) license
- Enhance professional learning and business training
- Expand options and availability of child care for MA families
- Build sectoral partnerships that support the growth and sustainability of the FCC field
